After leaving Egypt, the Israelites journeyed through the wilderness for 40 years, led by Moses and Aaron (Numbers 33:1-2). The people were plagued with constant complaining, disobedience, and idolatry, which led to God's wrath against them (Numbers 11:4; 20:2-13).

As they traveled, the Israelites faced numerous challenges, including encounters with various nations, natural disasters, and spiritual struggles. Despite these obstacles, God provided for their needs, often through miraculous means (Numbers 16:1-35; 21:4-9). The people's faith was tested time and again, as they were required to follow God's laws and trust in His promises.

One notable incident occurred when a red heifer was sacrificed according to God's instructions (Numbers 19:1-10), symbolizing the cleansing of Israel from their impurities. Throughout their journey, God reminded the Israelites of His covenant with them and encouraged them to remain faithful (Numbers 32:13; 35:34).
